Name That Cow!

We've introduced you to our new Cash Cow Kids Account for our youth members and we have realized that the little guy or gal needs a name.

And who better to name it than our members?

SOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!

We are having a contest this summer for youth members 0-17 to submit name suggestions via email during June and July. Afterwards, 10 finalists will be selected and a poll put on our Facebook page for our followers to vote. The name with the most votes will win.

The winner will receivedrumroll please..... A NEW BIKE!
That's right! We'll give the winner a new bike!

So get creative and send your entry to contest@genfed.com by July 30, 2015 and get your chance to win! Make sure to tell everyone you know to follow us on Facebook so they can vote for you, if you're a finalist.

$100 maximum spent on winner's bike. Entries must be received by July 30, 2015.

How to Cut the Cost of Driving

Gasoline prices are rising again, but fuel is just one factor in the high cost of driving an auto. The average cost of driving a sedan 15,000 miles a year will cost you $8,698, or 58 cents per mile. You'll spend 70.8 cents a mile, or $10,624 a year, to put 15,000 miles on an SUV with four-wheel-drive.

Many factors feed the cost of driving: financing, depreciation, maintenance, insurance, and driving habits.

Financing: Credit unions often offer the best rates on loans, but you also should compare the loan term, fees, and prepayment penalties. If the dealer offers a rebate, you may save more money by taking the rebate and financing at GenFed than taking the low-rate loan.

Depreciation: Depreciation is usually the largest part of the cost of driving: AAA estimates the average annual depreciation on a medium sedan driven 15,000 miles per year at $3,654. Kelley Blue Book says that after five years, the average car is worth 35% of its sticker price. But some cars, especially Honda and Toyota, have much lower depreciation. Ignoring the current value of a used car can put you "upside-down" if you trade the car and pay off the loan: You owe more on the car than it's worth.

Maintenance and repair: AAA estimated the maintenance costs of sedans at 5.11 cents per mile in 2015. Maintenance costs varied widely by vehicle type but, on average, were up slightly from 2014.

Insurance: AAA estimated insurance costs for the average sedan at $1,115 per year, based on a low-risk driver with a clean driving record. Insurance for drivers who are male, younger than age 25, poor students, or have a record of moving violations and/or accidents is more expensive. Raising the deductible and reducing the maximum coverage can lower premiums but will increase your risk.

Driving habits:

- Drive defensively. Try to stay off the road late at night when most accidents occur.
- Keep tires inflated to improve mileage and cut the chance of a blowout.
- Drive mild, not wild: Accelerating slowly and coasting up to stoplights can improve gas mileage up to 30%.
- Use the cruise control for highway driving to save 4% to 14% in gas.
- Drive less to save on gas, oil, maintenance, and depreciation. Think about carpooling, taking public transit, biking, or walking.

You're more than a score

At GenFed, we use more than a credit score to decide when to grant a loan. GenFed doesn't participate in risk-based lending and, with our approval system, members can understand the criteria. GenFed takes time to find out what's behind the score. We look at more than the number. As an owner of GenFed, we owe you that much.

HEALTH SAVINGS ACCOUNT

A Health Savings Account is a tax-exempt account in which you accumulate savings to pay medical expenses that make up your deductible or that are not covered by your plan. This could be a great way for you to save money on medical expenses if you have a high-deductible health plan. If you already have your HSA established elsewhere, make sure to compare the rates, fees and interest to GenFed's account! We'll likely save you money.
